1

B Did you hear about the new app for learning piano?

G No, what is it?

B You can play the piano on the screen.

G It sounds fun! I'll try it.

2

G Did you hear about the new song by VIP?

B No, I didn't.

G It's really hot on social media!

B Really? I'll check it out!

3

G I'm not sure how to start my science group project.

B Did you hear about "Chat Together"?

G No, what is it?

B It's an app for group chat. With this app, you can easily share ideas with your group.

G That sounds very helpful!

W Digital citizenship is about using the Internet safely, kindly, and responsibly. To be a good digital citizen, there are some rules to follow. First, we need to protect our personal information. Second, we should treat others with respect. Finally, we need to find true information online. By following these rules, we can become responsible members of the digital world.

Watch

B Did you hear about our summer vacation? It's going to be three months long!

G Really? That sounds strange. Where did you hear that?

B I saw a post on social media last night. Everyone's sharing it, and my friends are so happy about it.

G Hmm, I can't believe it. We need to check the school website to make sure it's true.

B There's no information about a long summer vacation on the website. But I'm still not sure.

G Then, why don't we ask our homeroom teacher?

B Oh, that's a good idea! Let's go to the teacher's office tomorrow!

G Sounds great!

Wrap Up

G Did you hear about the changes at our school?

Our school is getting a water park on the school playground!

B Hmm, I can't believe it. We need to check the facts.

G Good idea. What can we do?

B Let's check the school website now.

G Okay.

The Curious Story of the Chocolate Menu

Grong a school news reporter

Acky a curious student

You know what? Next week, our lunch is going to be all chocolate!

Yes, that's right. Chocolate fries, chocolate burgers, and chocolate salads.

Well, everyone is talking about the chocolate menu.

But doesn't the news sound strange? I need to check this out.

Yes, Grong. You are a school news reporter. You have to write a true story about this.

News that causes strong feelings can be fake. Why don't we look into it together, Acky?

That's a good idea.

Let's see. Where did this rumor start?

This type of news usually has an online source. We need to search online with our smartphones!

Look, here are many photos of chocolate burgers and fries. They come from the social media sites that are popular among our school students!

Exactly. We need to be careful about news on social media—it's not always reliable!

By the way, are those photos real? Fake news often copies images.

Let's check them out. We can upload the images to a reverse image search engine and find their original source.

Ah, these photos are from a food fair! Someone who stole them is trying to fool us!

You are right. The news seems fake. But we need to check different sources once more.

Then, let's ask the cafeteria manager about it through the live chat.

Hello, Mr. Aristo. There are rumors about a chocolate menu for next week. Are they true?

No, there's no chocolate on our menu next week.

But guess what? Every year around this time, I hear stories like this.

Ah, this fake news is not actually 'new' this time.

Why do we have it every year?

We can look up similar news and try to guess.

Oh, there are many similar stories which celebrate Spring Joke Day and most of them come from humor websites.

Now I get it. Next week, it'll be Spring Joke Day!

Every Spring Joke Day, we get similar rumors! We need to be extra careful during the joke season.

The next day...
