

Unit 2 Let's Taste the World

Communicate

- 사실 확인하기

A: I heard we're having chicken salad for lunch today. Is that true?

B: Yes, it is.

- 정보 수정하기

A: The Bread Festival is on May 22.

B: I'm afraid that's not right. It's on April 22.

Language Use

- 목적격 관계대명사

It is a traditional food that we eat on New Year's Day.

- 목적을 나타내는 To부정사

To celebrate the beginning of spring, we spend all day outside.

Communicate A

B Sujin, I'm so hungry. I didn't have breakfast today.

G It's already 12. We're having lunch soon, Tom.

B I heard we're having fried chicken for lunch today.

Is that true?

G I don't think so. They changed the menu to pizza.

B Really? I'm so disappointed.

G Don't be. It's chicken pizza. It also comes with strawberry juice!

Communicate B

G I went on a trip to Sydney last year. It's a beautiful city.

B Sydney is the biggest city in Australia, right?

G Yes, it is. It's also one of the most famous cities in the world.

B Then Sydney must be the capital city of Australia.

G I'm afraid that's not right. It's Canberra.

B Oh, I see! I didn't know that.

Communicate C

B Lucy, how was your weekend?

G I went to a new Thai restaurant near the park with my family.

B Oh, I heard the restaurant is already very popular.

Is that true?

G Yes, it is. We waited for about an hour.

B Really? How was the food?

G It was good. I ate tom yum goong.

B I've heard of it. It's a fried noodle dish with shrimp, right?

G I'm afraid that's not right. That's pad Thai. Tom yum goong is a hot and sour soup with shrimp.

B Oh, I see. Their names are confusing.

Talk to Play

1 "Marhaban" means "Hello" in Arabic.

2 "Sumimasen" means "Sorry" or "Excuse me" in Japanese.

3 "Lo siento" means "Sorry" in Spanish.

4 "Xiè xiè" means "Thank you" in Chinese.

5 "Aroi" means "It's delicious" in Thai.

6 "Bon appétit" means "Enjoy your meal" in French.

Time to Present

1

G Kevin, can I use your notebook?

B Of course. Here it is.

G What is this? I need a computer.

B Oh, you need a laptop, not a notebook.

2

B I need a new carrier.

G You mean a drink carrier?

B Huh? I need a bag for my trip.

G Oh, you mean a suitcase.

Wrap Up

6

B Minji, I heard you're good at making apple pie. Is that true?

G Yes, it is! Making apple pie is easy.

B That's great! Can you make some for me?

G Sure.

7

G Look! This is maple syrup from my aunt. Mexico is famous for it.

B I'm afraid that's not right. Canada is famous for maple syrup.

G Oh, I got it. Thanks for telling me.

2과 본문

Food Brings the World TogetherJiwon

Welcome! I'm Jiwon from Korea. My favorite food is tteokguk. It is a traditional food that we eat on New Year's Day. While people are eating it, they wish for a good, long life. Can you share some special dishes from a festival in your country?

Sugar on Snow

Hi, I'm Olivia. I live in Quebec, Canada. Every spring, we hold maple syrup festivals. People get sap from maple trees and boil it to make maple syrup. During the festivals, we enjoy pancakes with the syrup. Some people even drink it by itself! We enjoy maple candy, too. People also call it "sugar on snow." To make it, just pour hot syrup onto snow and wrap it around a stick. It's sweet and soft!

Smelling the Spring Wind

Hello. My name is Ahmed. I live in Cairo, Egypt. I will introduce my country's oldest festival, Sham El-Nessim. It means "smelling the spring wind." The Egyptians whom you can see in our old paintings also enjoyed this festival. To celebrate the beginning of spring, we spend all day outside. We go on picnics and enjoy our traditional meals. The most important food is fesikh, a kind of fish dish that many Egyptians love. My favorite food is colorful eggs. I like the rainbow ones!

Day of the Dead

Hi, I'm Mateo from Mexico City. In Mexico, we celebrate a holiday, Día de Muertos. It means "Day of the Dead." In November, we gather together to remember family members who passed away. We visit their graves with their photos, flowers, and traditional foods as gifts. We also share sugar skulls and pan de muerto with our family and friends. Pan de muerto is a traditional kind of bread for the dead. We usually use sugar skulls as decorations. This year, I made some sugar skulls with my friends. Look! Do you like them?