The Family Puzzle

There once was a lovely family with three children. The children were very close. But as they got older, they slowly grew apart. One day, the parents called the children together. "Do you remember this room? You used to play here. It was always filled with happiness," said the father. The mother continued, "But now, you don't even talk to each other. So, we made a puzzle for you. Here are three silver coins. Go to the market and buy something to fill this room completely. If you succeed, you will get a big reward."

Ethan, the eldest child, said, "We will do our best."

The youngest of the family, Annie, was puzzled.

"Three silver coins aren't enough to fill this room!"

The father replied, "If you work together, you can figure it out. Three heads are better than one."

Patrick, the middle child, shouted, "I know the answer!" He grabbed a silver coin and ran out the door.

Patrick returned after he bought two bags of feathers from the market. He began to fill the room with feathers, but they barely covered the floor. Ethan said to Patrick, "Why did you act on your own?" Patrick dropped his head. "I'm sorry. I thought I knew the answer." Annie sighed. "Now we only have two coins left."

The children went to the market together. Patrick had another idea. "How about straw? It's cheaper than feathers, but it takes up more space." Ethan said, "Great idea! But let's only use one coin for now." "Good thinking! That way, we can play it safe," said Annie. Ethan continued, "If straw is not the answer, we will have one more chance with the last coin."

They returned home with six bundles of straw. The straw came up to their knees, but it wasn't enough. Ethan said, "We need to think differently. How about water?" Patrick said, "The water would just leak out of the room. Perhaps the answer isn't something physical after all." Annie yelled, "That's it! I know the answer. Let's go to the market again."

When they got back home, Annie took a candle out of her bag. The candle was lit by Patrick, and the entire room was filled with light. The mother yelled excitedly, "You solved the puzzle!" Now, they could see drawings on the wall. "Look! That's us! Our family," said Annie. Patrick said, "I remember these drawings. They were drawn by us when we were little." Ethan turned to his parents. "Now I understand. The greatest reward in the world is my family."
